

Whitford's Hank Hoshall presents the WRC plaque to Tracy Trotter, president and owner of Calico Coatings.

Calico Coatings named a "Whitford Recommended Coater"

July 2012, Denver, NC. Whitford, makers of the world's largest, most complete line of fluoropolymer coatings, recently launched a Recommended Coaters program to recognize those companies with an outstanding reputation. Among the requirements to join this program are experience in applying Whitford coatings, attendance at one of Whitford's training sessions and a comprehensive quality program in place. One of the newest members of this Recommended Coater program is Calico Coatings.

Calico has gained their reputation as the leader in the coatings industry by working with race teams and engine builders to solve issues of friction, wear, heat and corrosion. Calico has continued to diversify their coating solutions over the years and today provides coatings not only to the performance racing industry, but also to the U.S. Military, marine, oil, health care and other industries. Their coatings are designed to reduce friction, wear, heat and corrosion while increasing speed and fuel economy.

Says Tracy Trotter, president and owner of Calico Coatings, "We would like to thank Whitford for this recognition and what it represents."
